

FAITH COMMUNITY

Hosting Scouting at your congregation

Presbyterian Churches

WHAT THIS MEANS

You provide the home. Your council provides the program.

Chartering a Scouting unit means your congregation becomes the unit's home. You are not asked to run the program or train the leaders — your local council does that. What you provide is a place to meet, a point of contact, and a welcome to the families who come. In return, young people in your community get adventure, friendship, leadership and service.

Your congregation provides

- A place to meet
- A representative from your congregation
- A welcome to local families

Your council provides

- The full program, training and materials
- Youth-protection standards and insurance framework
- Recruiting and sign-up support
- A local contact who helps you start

“Duty to God” sits at the heart of the Scout Oath — and religious emblems are owned and taught by the faith, not by Scouting.

IN PRACTICE

What hosting a unit actually looks like

Weekly meetings

Around 60–90 minutes, in a room you already have. A hall, classroom or meeting room is enough.

A unit of your own

The pack or troop is chartered to your organization and carries your name.

Familiar and new faces

Families you already know, plus others from the neighborhood who come through your doors.

GETTING STARTED

Five steps to your first meeting

- 1 Talk with your local council
They explain what chartering involves and answer questions specific to your congregation.
- 2 Name a point of contact
One person who links your congregation and the unit.
- 3 Agree on a meeting place and time
Most units meet weekly. A hall, classroom or meeting room is enough.
- 4 Invite your families
Use the Co-Branding Studio to make a flyer carrying your own name and logo.
- 5 Hold your first meeting
Your council helps with recruiting, registration and leader training.

COMMON QUESTIONS

Quick answers

Can our congregation charter a Scouting unit?

Yes — congregations and faith organizations are eligible chartered organizations and are among Scouting's most established partners.

Does Scouting teach our doctrine?

No. Religious-emblem programs are owned and taught by the faith's own counselor; Scouting only encourages youth in their Duty to God. Faith instruction always stays with the congregation.

What religious emblems are available?

The P.R.A.Y. series — God and Me, God and Family, God and Church, and God and Life; the Celtic Cross recognizes adult leaders — typically administered by Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) youth ministries and P.R.A.Y.. See the religious-awards chart for the current list.

How do we recognize adult volunteers?

Most faiths offer an adult Scouting recognition through their national committee, and Scouting America awards a universal religious-emblems adult knot. Ask your council's religious-emblems coordinator.
